This BCN event will be organised for students on the day preceding the actual SLTBR congress. During this event, two leading scientists will discuss topics that are especially interesting for students:

Prof. Bill Schwartz from the Departments of Neurology and of Integrative Biology at the University of Texas (Austin) and Chief editor of the Journal of Biological Rhythms will present an interactive guide to when, where and how to publish your work.

Prof. Samer Hattar, working at the NIMH in Bethesda (Washington) will talk about the newest insights of retinal circuits underlying the effects of light on rhythms, mood and learning. You might even benefit from this knowledge for your own wellbeing and performance!

After these talks you will be invited for an interactive discussion regarding these topics and your own work. Benefit from the knowledge of these esteemed scientists!
